Academic Financial Solutions Launches Campus411.org

May 11, 2006 (Tampa, Florida) Academic Financial Solutions, a leading provider of higher education financing resources, announced today the launch of a new website aimed at giving college-bound students an opportunity to get the real “411” about their prospective schools: www.Campus411.org.

Campus411.org is a great resource for both inbound college students and students that want to learn a little more about their current school. The website offers information on how to pay for college as well as many helpful personal finance topics. The most popular feature on Campus411 is the college rankings provided by the university lifestyle experts at College Prowler. These rankings measure everything from where the best places to eat on campus are to where the hottest nighttime hangouts are located.

“Campus411 features two main benefits: 1st, Campus411 lets current students educate prospective students about what “really goes on” at over 200 colleges and universities across the country,” said Michael Babb, President of Academic Financial Solutions. “2nd, financing your college education is becoming increasingly more complicated, and Campus411.org offers a lot of great advice on how to pay for college.”

The College Prowler school rankings are compiled from thousands of on-campus surveys, and they let students know where the schools they are interested in stack up against everyone else. To get access to the college rankings, you have to register to be a member of the Campus411 community. Everyone that registers is entered into a monthly drawing for a new iPod Shuffle.

“Partnering with Academic Financial Solutions and Campus411.org has given us a chance to raise the visibility of our award winning college guides,” said Luke Skurman, CEO of College Prowler. “College Prowler was established to create an environment where “students help students” make informed decisions regarding choosing a college or university. Campus411.org does a great job of helping us achieve that goal.”
